DEMOCRATS HEAR OTHER NOMINATIONS MADE

SENATOR REED IS NAMED BY CHAS. M. HOWELL

EX-SENATOR HITCHCOCK, NEBRASKA, ANOTHER FAVORITE SON

CONVENTION SWEEPS ON TO EARLY SELECTION OF SMITH

By CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Convention Hall, Houston, Texas, June 28.—Sweeping onward toward early selection of Governor Smith of New York as democracy's banner bearer in the presidential campaign, the democratic convention today passed to hear nominating speeches for other candidates.

Senator James A. Reed of Missouri was named for the presidential nomination by his friend, Charles M. Howell. Two demonstrations, one lasting less than two minutes, and a second lasting twenty minutes, marked the Reed nomination. There was plenty of noise but no fight, and there were only a few state banners in the parade.

The Reed demonstration ended, the convention heard another "favorite son" named—ex-Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska.

The forenoon session adjourned at 12:40 until 3 P. M.

There were loud cries of "No," and many demanded a roll call, but the chairman ruled that the ayes had it and the delegates began to file out for lunch.

The convention was willing to do some cheering and some demonstrating but it was clear it was anxious to get the oratory out of the way and to get down to receiving the party platform and balloting on presidential and vice presidential candidates.

The entire platform committee turned during the forenoon to examining the draft made during the night hours by its drafting sub-committee. The dry plank had been shaped into an endorsement of the 18th amendment enforcement. There were also satisfactory farm and corporation planks, the possibility of fighting out the dry situation on the floor still loomed this afternoon, but Smith managers were talking of the possibility of a cleanup tonight.

The platform committee this afternoon will submit its full platform text.

The delegates manifestly desired to finish the nominating speeches. Cordell Hull of Tennessee and Jesse Jones of Houston were still to be named. The platform, under the convention's rules, has right of way over the nominating speeches.

ROOSEVELT NOMINATED SMITH LAST NIGHT

Convention Hall, Houston, Texas, June 28.—Democrats, their tempers frayed by heat, bad elevator service, high prices and political differences, convened in Sam Houston Coliseum again this forenoon to listen to more nominating speeches.

They already had had their big show in the demonstration following the nomination speech for Gov. Alfred E. Smith last night, and they were prepared to ratify that nomination as soon as possible.

There had been several intra-delegation outbursts in yesterday's day and night meetings which required police to quell. More might come today.

The platform committee struggled in the night with the platform about which revolves the question of a row, with its dynamite section on prohibition. Gov. Dan Moody, red-haired and youthful, was carrying the banner of the dries, and threatening to go onto the floor with his fight for a plank, naming the 18th amendment specifically and drier than the compromisers are willing to grant.

When the platform will go before the convention was uncertain.

The general thought was that the convention would clear away the nominating speeches and then listen to the platform.

The only set order of business for the convention was to clean up the nominating and seconding speeches which were dropped last night when, after a spectacular Smith demonstration and some rows inside the Mississippi delegation, the convention adjourned at 11:15 P. M.

The nominating speeches remaining were:

For Senator James Reed, of Missouri—Charles M. Howell, of Kansas City.

For former Senator Gilbert Hitch-

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—(U.P.)—Twenty of the 26 airplanes entered in the national air tour were on the ground at Ford airport today prepared for final trials before starting Saturday on their 6,300 mile journey. The remainder of the entrants will arrive here for trials tomorrow.

George Haldeman, co-pilot with Eddie Stinson on his record endurance flight, will fly the second Bellanca plane in the tour for the Ford reliability trophy. William S. Brock, who barely failed in his attempt for a round the world flight, will pilot the other Bellanca.

With the exception of Denmark and Italy, all of the 13 balloon crews entered in the Gordon Bennett international races are here today. The balloonists will take off late Saturday afternoon as the closing event of the air Olympics.

Captain Paul Roehre, Dr. Paul Laubenthal and Peter Hesselbach, chosen from 30,000 German glider enthusiasts to introduce the art in the country, were the most disappointed men at the field today. Through a misunderstanding the wrong type of gliders for use on a field like the Ford airport was shipped them and they will be unable to demonstrate their sport to the 200,000 persons expected to attend the air tournament.

Then there were also seconding speeches for Smith still hanging fire. Included is one by Albert Nelson, Minnesota.

Smith's name was placed in nomination last night by Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, former assistant secretary of the navy.

"We offer one who has the will to win—who not only deserves success, but commands it," Roosevelt said in concluding. "Victory is his habit—the happy warrior."

Then a blazing demonstration started. Before it had run its course in the next 26 minutes, an outburst inside the Mississippi delegation had required police intervention, and it appeared as though the fight might spread to other quarters of the sweltering floor.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 28.—Slowly clearing skies through the great Arctic area today brought hope that search might start soon for 21 lost explorers.

Three days of unfavorable weather have prevented flights over the Arctic wastes where three separate parties are lost.

Fears grew hourly that part of this group of 21 might never be heard from.

Six were in the dirigible Italia when it sailed away, a victim of the winds. One group of nine men was left on the ice with their shattered gondola.

Three of the men who landed on the ice, headed by Finn Malmgren, started walking towards relief.

They had 49 days' food supply but no tents, and no firearms.

They have now been gone about four weeks.

Nothing has been heard of Roald Amundsen and the five members of his expedition that set out by airplane from Tromsø early this month. The six men remaining on the ice, from which Umberto Nobile was rescued, still await rescue either by airplane, or by ice cutters.

A great number of ships moved into the territory to the rescue of the six men on the ice and to search for the other 15 missing men. A French cruiser and destroyer have arrived in the northland; a Norwegian cruiser has been assigned to the northern waters in addition to a number of smaller Norwegian boats and the steamship Hobby which is making a trip financed by an American woman.

In the plane with Courtney are his backer, E. B. Hosmer, Canadian millionaire; Sergeant Price, mechanic, and Radio Operator Gilmore.

To Prevent Steel Rusting

Countdown oil is said to have proved efficient in preventing rust on steel and to have been adopted by the German army. It only requires to be spread with a piece of flannel in a very thin layer, over the metallic surface and allowed to dry up. Such a coating will afford security against all atmospheric influences and will not show any cracks under the microscope after a year's standing. To remove it the article has simply to be treated with countdown oil again and washed after 12 to 24 hours.

Devastating Plagues

The great plague of London, which killed more than half the inhabitants who did not flee the city, was by no means the worst outbreak that has been so recorded. The plague called "black death" devastated Europe for 50 years in the fourteenth century, destroying two-thirds to three-fourths of the population of large territories and one-fourth of all the people, or about 26,000,000 persons. Since 1896 plague has carried away more than 10,000,000 people in India alone.—Exchange.

No matter who is elected for President this country will never see the time every home will be "bone dry," says a certain prominent statesman. We don't agree with him. We say every home in America can be made "bone dry," at least from the basement up, if the roof is covered with good old MULE-HIDE.

When you are hungry, you don't take competitive bids on a platter of ham and eggs. You just pick a good looking restaurant and rely on the owner to pick out a couple

Published for the information and entertainment of the home-loving folks in Brainerd and vicinity by the Standard Lumber Co.

No matter who is elected for President this country will never see the time every home will be "bone dry," says a certain prominent statesman. We don't agree with him. We say every home in America can be made "bone dry," at least from the basement up, if the roof is covered with good old MULE-HIDE.

When you are hungry, you don't take competitive bids on a platter of ham and eggs. You just pick a good looking restaurant and rely on the owner to pick out a couple of fresh ones and a tender cut of pig. When you are building or repairing, why not have confidence in us to make our choice for you too? We know roofing, millwork and lumber just as the restaurant man knows his eggs and are more than glad to be of service to you at any time.

Listen housewives. Canning season will be here soon and now is the time to have dad make a nice fruit closet in the cellar. (Leave room for the experimental laboratory, however.) The cost is small and it's a sure remedy against spoilage of canned fruits. Ask us for prices.

Being boosters for this community, as we are, we hate to say anything about anybody but we do know of several people who could greatly improve the looks of their place with a little of our Breinig Bros. Paint.

EXTRA!
Blind Beggar: I see by the paper they're going to stop us from beggin' in this town.
Deaf Beggar: That's what I hear.

Jim: There's an awful lot of girls who don't want to get married.

Jim: I've asked them!

Side Dishes Feature of Norwegian Dinner

We spent two nights at Stalheim, Norway, which is not a village or even a hamlet; merely a hotel superbly situated above and almost against a tremendous waterfall at a point where two great valleys intersect. A. Edward Newton relates in the Atlantic Monthly.

Here it was that we first encountered the abundance of hors d'oeuvre for which Norway is famous. Upon entering the dining room one noticed a great table running almost the entire length of the room; upon it were piles of plates and an immense quantity of food, chiefly fish, salted, smoked, oiled, boiled—all cold—and cold meats, with an endless variety of cheese.

One was expected to take a plate, help one's self—"cut and come again"—and take one's place at the table, when some single hot dish, with tea, coffee or chocolate, was brought by a maid prettily dressed in native costume.

To one bored to extinction by the ordinary table d'hôte it was a pleasant change.

Hawaiian Queen's Odd Assertion of Kinship

One of the court officers said to me during Queen Victoria's jubilee: "Royalties are here from every country and among those who have come over is Liliuokalani, queen of the Hawaiian Islands. She is as insistent of her royal rights as the emperor of Germany. We have consented that she should be a guest at a dinner of our queen and spend the night at Windsor castle. We have settled her place among the royalties in the procession through London and offered her the honors as her guard of honor. She insists, however, that she shall have the same as the other kings, a company of the Guards. Having recognized her, we are obliged to yield."

The same officer told me that at the dinner the dusky queen said to Queen Victoria: "Your majesty, I am a blood relative of yours."

"How so?" was the queen's astonished answer.

"Why," said Liliuokalani, "my grandfather ate your Captain Cook."—From "My Memories of Eighty Years," by Chauncey M. Depew.

Colonial Beauty Lasting

Why is the simple Colonial style of the early American period one of inimitable dignity and loveliness?

Why does the old German castle, the French chateau, the Italian villa or the quaint English cottage charm us, even though built a century or more ago?

Their builders did not set out to duplicate foreign individualities. A French baron did not want an English cottage; neither did a German count want a Spanish bungalow. And just so did the American colonists want architectural expressions of their own—those expressions which have since been rendered traditional and perpetuated as classic.—Keith's Magazine.

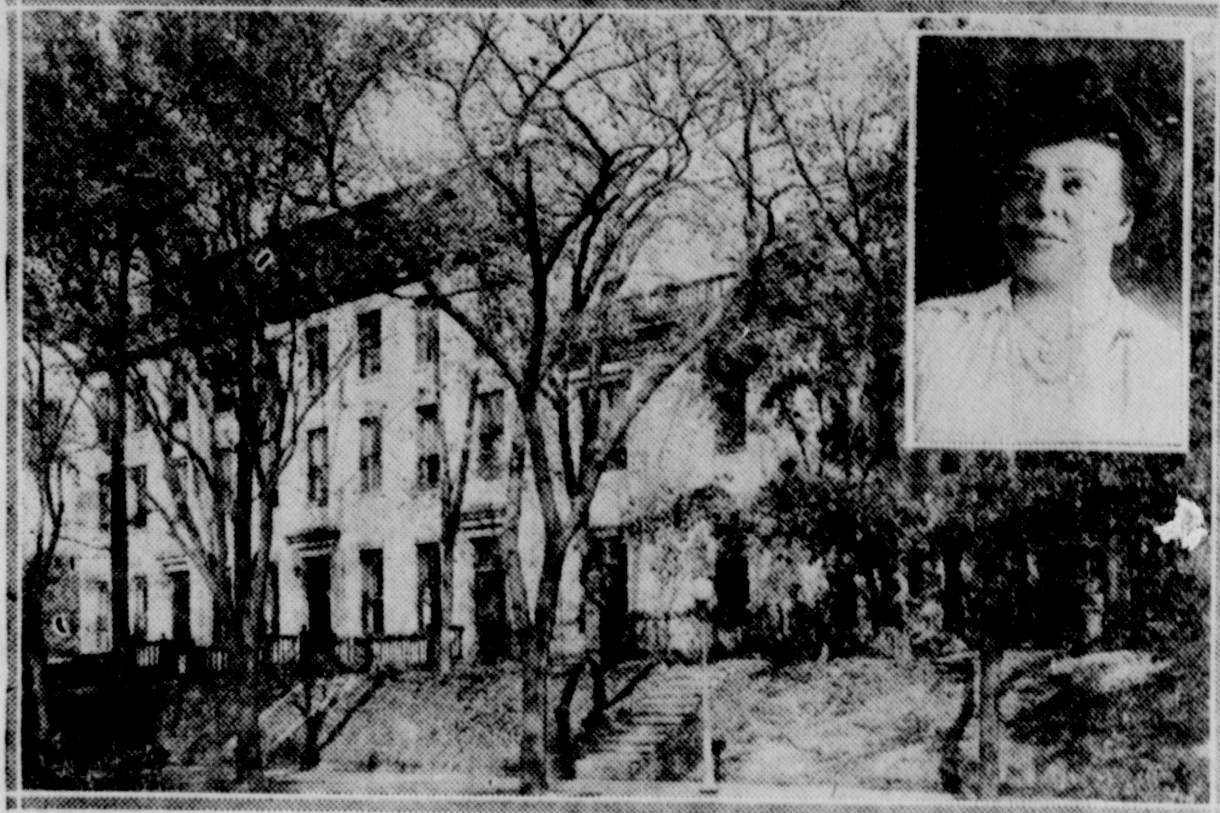

Rat Enemy of Human Race

"The rat's destructiveness is not confined to crops and property," says a recent official statement issued by the biological survey. "The animal menaces human life as well. This rodent is responsible for more deaths among human beings than all the wars of history. Not all the fatal epidemics were bubonic plague but enough of them have been so identified to show that almost every century of the Christian era has had at least one visitation from this scourge, which destroyed millions of people."

Deadlier Weapons Now

Setting fire to a fleet is not a lost art. We have all the early accounts of this method of destroying a fleet, but in this age of long-range guns and steamships it is simply obsolete.

TO PRESERVE OLD CAPITOL OF UNITED STATES

The building was erected in 1814 to prevent removal of the capital away from Washington after the British had burned the former Capitol. (Inset) Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont who purchased the "Old Capitol" for headquarters of the National Women's Party.

"Sorrell and Son" One of Finest Pictures This Season

"Sorrell and Son" has been acclaimed everywhere it has been shown as one of the finest, if not the very finest, pictures produced during the past five years.

Don't miss "Sorrell and Son," now at the Lyceum theatre.

The long-awaited screen version of that novel of father-and-son devotion which has been read by hundreds of thousands of readers throughout the world, yesterday had its local premiere at the Lyceum theatre, and it is easily ranked among the year's five best pictures. In many ways it is the most absorbing achievement in cinema realism ever made.

The power to estimate and the sense of calculation are very valuable assets to any one and should appear in more specimens of writing than they do.

You will note in the writing of the shrewd estimator a triangular loop to the y. He also makes his t bar run back from the bottom of the down stroke, forming a triangle when brought back to the right. These two signs mean that the writer is capable of looking back, going from one corner of a question or problem to another and taking them all in before coming to a decision.

Terminal will be clipped and in between the y's with the three-cornered lower loops you will find some y's without loop, but a simple down stroke of short length. Capital letters will often be printed.

T bars will be exactly over upright and a little high. Some words will be connected together. Others will be made with letters separated. Writing will be medium or small and there will be many fine points visible. The estimator is usually a critic—always an analyst and if you marry him you must know that you will have to measure up or take the criticism broadly.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

Original "Dark Horse"

Judge McIlwain, famous racing judge, asked to give an opinion as to the relative chances of two favorites advised both parties to save supper money from their bets, as there would be a "dark horse" in the race. He had noticed a black horse hitched to a buggy outside which he knew to be a more famous racer than either of the contestants.

Heavy Charges

A hunter who went to Africa to kill off lions and leopards reports that he had many narrow escapes including charges by a rhino, a buffalo, an elephant and the steamship company.

Dickens Relics Sold

Once owned by Dickens, a meerschaum pipe was disposed of at a sale in London for £54 ($270). With the pipe was a letter written by Dickens in July, 1862, lending his meadow to the Higham Cricket club and stating that he had a sincere desire to be "a good friend to the working men in his neighborhood."

Romans Liked Oysters

It is difficult, if not impossible, to say when oysters were first used as food. The Romans knew the art of oyster culture and practiced it to a limited degree.

What Does "Replacement Value" Mean?

Every housewife realizes that she must pay a higher price for out-of-the-season fruits and vegetables. We sell merchandise of Style in our Stores, exactly as your grocer sells food, and naturally we must pay a higher price for a Style that is fresh than several months later.

When a garment has been in our stock for several weeks, its Style-Value has decreased. If we went into the open market it could be bought for possibly one-third less. We consider it only fair, therefore, to re-mark the price accordingly, but we never mention the original price because the garment is not actually worth that now.

The customer who bought a similar Style earlier in the season has had weeks of wear and fresh Style for that one-third, and the customer who preferred to sacrifice that enjoyment will have her saving.

We consider this is giving both parties a square deal. What do you think about it?

THE PERSONAL TOUCH IN EDUCATION

EDUCATION fails when its method is based solely on the quantity production idea. Cramming as much information as possible into as many students' heads as possible makes for discontented dullards instead of keen and well-trained intellects.

Most American universities are departing from the old "spoon-feeding" technique, realizing—as English universities long have realized—that treatment of the undergraduate mind as a vacuum to be filled as expeditiously as possible is not only barbaric, but a method that defeats its own purpose.

At the present time Harvard university allows its students, at the end of their freshman year, to select a field of concentration in particular subjects, assigning special tutors for individual advice and instruction. The aim is "the mastery of some subject as a whole, to be acquired as far as possible by the student's own work."

At the University of Wisconsin Professor Meikeljohn has furthered the intimate method of education by the establishment of a freshman-sophomore college; in California the Pomona-Scripps colleges are furnishing an American example of how a small college may grow, not by enlargement of the main unit, but by adding other small units; special guidance of able students is now provided at the University of Iowa; other universities, including Minnesota, are doing admirable work in maintaining the human touch with their students.

Mere size of a university has no definite relation to the value of the education taught; college authorities who have given serious thought to the subject have gradually come to the realization that the development of the student is of vastly more importance than the incidental growth of the university, and that the problem of large enrollments and consequent "lock-step" education demands a solution which will bring about more intimate contact of teacher and student, and a greater chance for the individual to develop his special abilities in special lines.—Minneapolis Star.

PRINTING THE NEWS

IF a newspaper should omit from its columns all news of crime and scandal it would fall just as far short of its duty as if it went to the other extreme and surrendered to sensationalism. So a middle-western editor told convention delegates at the Chicago Theological seminary.

Any one who gives thought to the subject will find it difficult to differ from this opinion. The mission of a newspaper is to print the news, not to suppress it. Unfortunately the world about us is not a moral Utopia. To represent it as such by printing only pleasant and constructive news would not improve conditions; it would only withhold actual facts from those who are entitled to know them. If the press by a great and impossible conspiracy should agree to ignore all criminality it would be an occasion for rejoicing by those whose feet follow devious paths.

Publicity is a light that illumines dark places. Activities of the underworld do not thrive when that light is turned on them. Fear of it is deterrent to the person who thinks of crossing the border line. An alert public conscience is quick to insist upon action when evil is dragged out of hiding. Were the papers to suppress news of crime peace officers would not be so clearly cognizant of the support that they always have from public opinion when the public possesses reliable data on which to base its estimates.

Moreover, in its practical details, publication of crime news is of greatest aid in the detection of criminals. Hickman might never have been caught if the press had not warned the public of his flight and scattered broadcast his description. Nelson, the strangler, would probably have continued his terrible career, had not the public and the police throughout the entire land been informed by the newspapers of his methods and habits. The list could be multiplied endlessly. In every big hunt for those who would cheat the law printer's ink is a factor in thwarting the offenders.—Portland Oregonian.

POWER OF ADVERTISING

BEYOND all question the most potent creator of business demands in America is the newspaper advertisement, says the Park Rapids Enterprise.

Millions upon millions of dollars are expended every day in the stores of the country because well written advertisements have directed public attention to convenient, becoming, attractive, useful, ornamental and suitable merchandise.

The sale of all necessities, all luxuries, all indulgences, is more powerfully stimulated by the newspaper advertisements than by any other agency. Only hunger, cold and nakedness are comparable to the advertisement as a promoter of sales—and even purchases of food, fuel and clothing are directed more largely by the business columns of the press than by any other influence except immediate necessity.

The largest stores in our greatest cities have been built up by their advertising, their persistent and clever invitation to the public in the press to share in their bargains. Imagine what would happen to daily sales of merchandise, real estate, theatre tickets, insurance, books and other things, if newspaper advertisements were prohibited by law for six months. It is not exaggeration to say that they would drop 50 per cent.

It is not the current news of events alone that makes the press of such incalculable value to the nation, nor the free editorial expression of opinion. The business news of the day, as told by business concerns in their announcements to the public, decisively influences both the volume and the direction of trade which flows to this or that store, office or bank. This is a fundamental fact no business house can afford to overlook.

BEWARE OF RANCORS

As the weeks wear away between now and the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, we will hear in increasing measures vituperation of men and measures, motives and intentions. It is always so in presidential years. The leaders themselves often have little part in this exchange of rancors, and deplore it heartily, but they cannot escape it; the more devoted their adherents, the more violent their assaults upon the opposition are likely to become.

We shall need to take care lest, hearing both sides, we decide that both are villains, conspirators, horse thieves, or, at the best, imbeciles. We know, however, that it isn't true; that all virtue, wisdom and good intent is not concerned in either political party; that the rank and file of Republicans and Democrats are just out-selves, with all our good points and shortcomings, neither booms nor ruffians, though doubtless with potentialities to be both.

It will be just as well for our peace of mind and our blood pressure if we remember this from time to time in the course of a period that unquestionably adds color and interest to existence.

Who doesn't like a hot discussion, a verbal rapiering, an exchange of brickbats now and then?

Nobody, we're afraid; reading the hot-blooded assaults of the advocates of universal peace upon the motives and morals of the preparedness group, we're sure they dearly love to break a lance. That, presumably, is part of our human heritage.

However, it is possible to break a lot of lances and have a thoroughly good time out of an election, taking it quite seriously, without falling into the error of soul gnawing hatred of the other chap.—Kansas City Post.

Playtime Clothes for Little Boys and Girls

Bobby and Bess are having a merry time gathering flowers in their new play clothes. And mother is happy, too, for it didn't take any time at all to make these small garments. Bobby's suit can be made of plain blue cotton drill bound with blue (or if you prefer—in khaki color bound with red). The trousers are regulation cut, buttoning on the bicus. Sister Bess' dress is a dainty feminine affair if made of quaintly printed batiste trimmed with binding, shirring and four little pearl buttons at the neckline.—Woman's Home Companion.

On Rearing Children from CRIB to COLLEGE

Compiled by the Editors of "CHILDREN, The Magazine for PARENTS"

Children whose every act is directed will not learn the self-direction they will need in adult life.

Playing the game of doctor and nurse with your children when they are well will help to remove that fear so many children have when a physician examines them. In play, teach them to hold their mouths open while you hold their tongues with a spoon and look at their throats. Gargling may be practiced in the same way, and will prove very useful when the time comes that makes gargling necessary.

A cardinal rule of water safety is: "Never go swimming alone." Many private camps and all Girl and Boy Scout camps use the "water buddy system," under which each boy or girl is given a swimming partner, or buddy.

Another safety precaution is: When you begin to feel tired, come out of the water. Children who are good swimmers are sometimes drowned because they overtax or overestimate their powers of endurance.

Children should be taught to stay out of the water for two hours after eating a meal and the reason for this should be carefully explained. By so doing, the great danger of stomach cramps will be avoided.

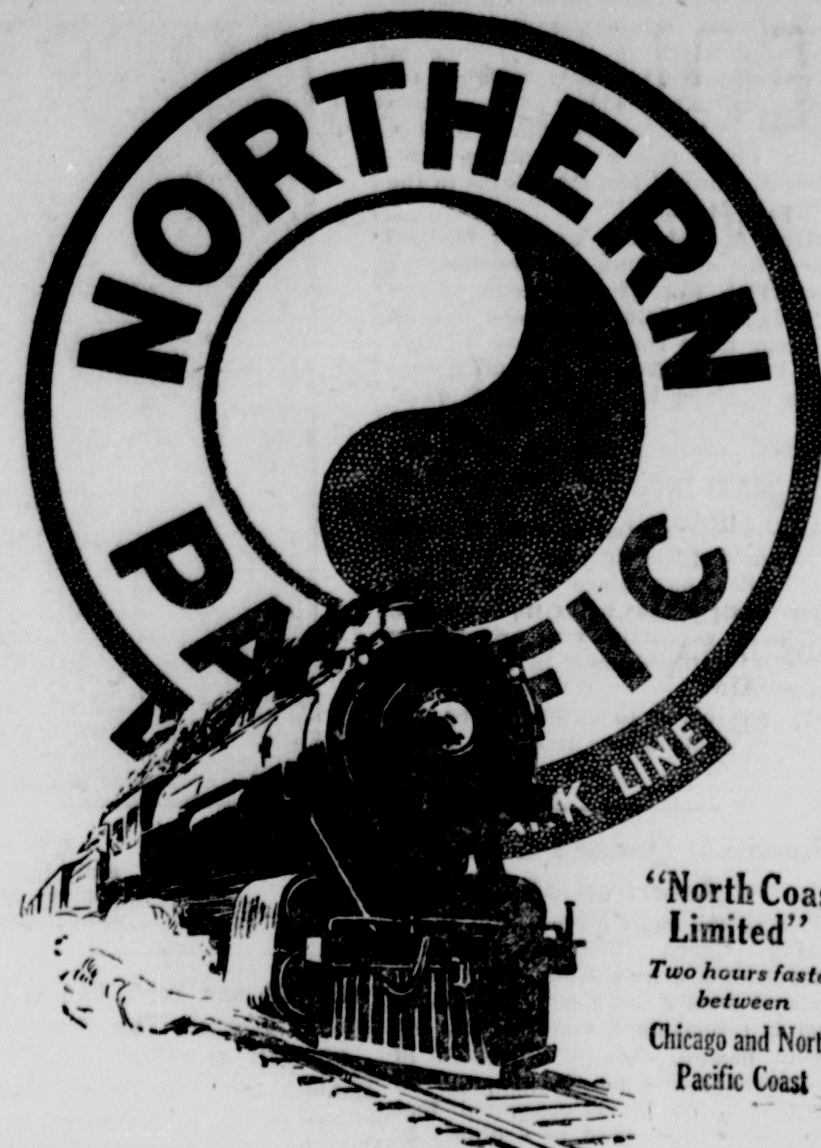

A wise mother will be absolutely certain of the quality of the ice cream which she allows her children to eat. That made from heavy cream is too rich for young children. Sherbets made from fruit juices, as lemon, orange, raspberry, grape or cherry, or a junket or cocoa ice cream, or a frozen custard made of milk and eggs are much more suitable. But since frozen deserts always contain more sugar than those thickened with eggs, gelatin or cornstarch, they should not be used more than once or twice a week for little children. On the other hand, the cool but not feed fruit drinks may be given freely.

As soon as the temperature climbs to 80 degrees, it is safe to let the youngster play in the sunny part of the garden in a sleeveless, opaque garment which will let through the violet rays of the sun, for several hours a day. However, a long exposure of this kind should be worked up to gradually. If the small totter is put in the sun for two hours on the first hot day, a sick child with a blistered skin will be the result. Tanning should be brought about even in healthy children by gradual exposures. On very hot days, 30 degrees or more, some protection for the head is advisable. When the thermometer is edging around 95 and 100 degrees, the child should not play in the direct sun during the heat of the day, but should be kept in the shade between 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Exposure to extreme heat tends to have a debilitating effect, as the body is not able to throw off readily its own excess heat. (© by Children, the Magazine for Parents.)

Skirts Must Flare

The widening of skirts has done more than give leg room. It has almost revolutionized materials for evening dresses. The stiffer foulards and taffetas, which hitherto have been devoted to afternoon wear, now are being chosen for evening costumes. The dresses have flares and tiers with waistlines higher in front and lower in back.

GEORGE GODFREY, "BLACK MENACE", DEFEATED BY RISKO

235 POUND NEGRO GOES WAY OF WILLS

RISKO'S MARGIN OVER THE NEGRO, HOWEVER, WAS SLIGHT

RISKO'S WHIRLWIND BODY ATTACK IN LAST 3 ROUNDS GAINS VICTORY

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., June 28.—The heavyweight division was without a "black menace" today for the first time in years.

George Godfrey, 235-pound Alabama negro, went the way of Harry Wills last night, as he lost the judges' decision to Johnny Risko of Cleveland, in a 10-round bout.

Godfrey, however, was not as completely eliminated from consideration as was Wills, who fouled Jack Sharkey in the thirteenth round to avoid a knockout. Risko's margin of victory was slight. There were few dissenting voices, however, in the crowd of 27,849 spectators.

A whirlwind body attack in the last three rounds won the decision for Risko. Godfrey punched the Cleveland boy around the ring during the larger part of the first five rounds.

The tide of the battle shifted after the fifth round. Risko opening up a fierce body attack which Godfrey was unable to stave off.

Risko had little success hammering at Godfrey's jaw in the early rounds because of the negro's excessive height. He shifted his attack to the body in the late rounds, and carried four of the last five almost solely on these wallops to the midriff.

Godfrey weakened after the fifth round and attempted to clinch and hold at every opportunity. Risko seemed to get his second wind in the sixth round, and from that point on did his best fighting.

There were no knockdowns. Godfrey almost threw Risko to the canvas several times when he wrestled and cuffed him in the clinches.

Risko won in spite of the fact that every physical advantage was against him. He conceded Godfrey 4½ pounds in weight, 5½ inches in height and 5 inches in reach. Risko weighed 190½.

Risko has a busy campaign in front of him, having already signed to meet Roberto Roberti, the Italian giant, in July, and Paulino Uzcudun in August. If victorious in both these fights, he will be matched with Jack Sharkey in September.

BABE RUTH HITS 29TH HOMER OF THIS SEASON

Philadelphia, June 28.—(U.P.)—Babe Ruth hit his 29th homer of the season in the first inning of today's Yankee-Athletic game off Rube Walberg, Philadelphia southpaw.

INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES OF N. D. IN LEAD

Bismarck, N. D., June 28.—(U.P.)—Independent candidates assumed the lead in the first returns of the North Dakota primary elections today.

First precinct reports gave R. A. Nestos, independent candidate for the nomination for United States senator on the republican ticket, a majority over Lynn J. Frazier, non-partisan candidate.

George T. Schafer, independent candidate for the republican nomination for governor, was leading by three to one over T. H. Thoreson, non-partisan.

Early returns on the proposal to remove the prohibition clause from the state constitution showed a small dry majority in favor of retaining the clause.

The Friend

"Our best friend is our worst enemy, for he causes us to plunge into a slough of trouble," said Mordecai Mose. "Our enemy is our friend because he lets us alone to go our way in peace. Does a young husband come home in a mellow condition at an untimely hour—he has met a friend. Whatever a bride hears to the detriment of her spouse comes through the insinuation of a friend. It is a friend's delight to persuade young folks that they can paint or write or act, thus entailing upon them heart-break and despair. And it is an incontrovertible fact that no one ever rushed into print to refute a derogatory rumor who had not first had his attention called to it by a friend. As the late Job remarked, 'Deliver me from my friends.'—Kansas City Star.

Bertha Books Good Teams For Early July Games

The House of David, Detroit Clowns and McCoy-Nolan Giants of Milwaukee will be seen in action against the fast Bertha team early in July. On July 1 the McCoy-Nolan Giants will play in Bertha. July 4 the Detroit Clowns will meet Bertha at Staples and on July 8 the House of David team, made up of bewhiskered athletes, will perform on the Bertha diamond. Manager Ernie Fisher believes that these three teams will play the sort of baseball that will put Bertha players on edge. Bertha has signed two new players, an infielder and outfielder which should strengthen the team as Manager Fisher has been playing all season so far with only nine men.

WILBUR COEN, GEORGE LOTT PASSED OUT

ALL ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY AT WIMBLEDON

FIELD AT END OF THE THIRD ROUND NARROWS TO 16

Wimbledon, England, June 28.—(U.P.)—Two American stars, Wilbur Coen and George Lott, passed out of the men's singles in the all England championships today as the field, at the end of the third round, narrowed to sixteen.

Young Coen went out, after a game fight, before a young Briton, H. W. Austin.

It took Rene LaCoste, the great French player, to eliminate George Lott; and even then it took him four sets to win.

While the Frenchmen breezed through the singles partly at America's expense, two French girls faded out before Miss Helen Wills and Miss Elizabeth Ryan—Miss V. and J. Callay.

Miss Wills won with greatest ease. Occasionally she uncorked a devastating drive, but she was not forced to extend herself in any department, though the French girl's footwork was fairly speedy.

Henri Cochet, present holder of the all England singles title, entered the last sixteen by beating Col. H. H. Mayes, of Canada, 6-1, 5-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Miss Helen Jacobs, of the United States team, followed Mrs. Molla Mallory to defeat. She was beaten 6-8, 6-1, 8-6 by Miss Daphne Akhurst, champion of Australia.

JOHNNY GOODMAN IS ELIMINATED FROM GOLF TOURNEY

Des Moines, Ia., June 28.—(U.P.)—With Johnny Goodman of Omaha, Neb., last year's champion, eliminated from the trans-Mississippi golf tournament, Jimmy Manion, St. Louis veteran, was favored today to win the 1928 title.

Manion, also a former champion, defeated E. J. Rogers of Oklahoma City, 6 and 5, in yesterday's round. The defeat of Goodman and Paul Jackson, 18-year-old Kansas City youth, left Manion the only titleholder in the race.

The other survivors were R. S. Juran, Minneapolis; J. K. Weatherby, Minneapolis; W. Webster, Omaha; Robert McCrary, Des Moines and O. B. Winter, St. Louis.

WHAT OUTSTANDING STARS DID YESTERDAY

(By United Press)

TOMMY LOUGHRAN TO MEET EMMANUEL IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

New York, June 28.—(U.P.)—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, will meet Armand Emmanuel, Jewish lawyer from San Francisco, in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Loughran is rated generally as a three to one favorite over Emmanuel.

The title will not be at stake, Emmanuel weighing more than the 175-pound limit.

New York, June 28.—(U.P.)—Armand Emmanuel, Pacific coast light heavyweight, outwitted Tommy Loughran by a half pound for their bout in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Emmanuel weighed 175½ and Loughran 174½.

Emmanuel was forced to drink three glasses of water to bring himself above the 175 pound light heavyweight maximum limit, in accordance with the articles of the fight, which therefore will not be a championship bout.

MRS. LEE MIDA HOLDS 1-STROKE LEAD OVER MRS. PARDUE

Chicago, June 28.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago, held a 1-stroke lead over Mrs. Austin Pardue of Hibbing, Minn., today as the women's western medal play championship entered its final 18-hole round.

Mrs. Mida, winner of two previous championships, duplicated her first 87 yesterday for a total of 174, while Mrs. Pardue took one stroke more. Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago was third with 178.

Ernie Nevers, the great football star, has been sent to the minors by the St. Louis Browns. It seems that the big leagues weren't in the need of touchdowns just now.

In his earliest baseball days, Wilbur Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn National League Baseball club, had quite a reputation as a wrestler as well as a ball player.

Five major league clubs are interested in the eighteen-year-old shortstop, Stevens, with New Haven in the Eastern league. His work has featured for New Haven this season.

Max Carey, Brooklyn outfielder, who has been tearing around the basepaths for 20 years, has led the National league in base thefts ten times in the past fourteen years and has been second the other four times.

Watching the Scoreboard

(By United Press)

Yesterday's Hero—Talt, Boston Red Sox right fielder, who hit safely five times out of as many trips to the plate. The Boston Red Sox won a double header from the Washington Senators 4 to 1 and 11 to 4.

The New York Yankees increased their American league lead to 11 games by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics 7 to 4.

The only national league game yesterday saw the New York Giants beat the Phillies for the fourth straight time 9 to 8.

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNEY ON THE MINIKAHDA COURSE

Minneapolis, June 28.—(U.P.)—With all outsiders eliminated, favorites settled down to their final battles here today in the third round of trans-Mississippi women's golf tournament on the Minikahda course.

Miss Marian Turpie, New Orleans, and Mrs. Marian Burns Horn, defending champion of Kansas City, meet their strongest opposition of the week but are favored to go into the fourth tomorrow. Miss Turpie is paired with Mrs. Dow George, Minneapolis, while Mrs. Horn meets Mrs. D. S. Veitch, Kansas City.

Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, who turned in a medal score of 84 for Wednesday's round, meets Mrs. R. E. Drennan, also of Kansas City, in the fourth pairing Patricia Stephenson, 17-year-old Minneapolis girl, opposes Mrs. F. B. Jafray, Minneapolis.

Miss Stephenson is the leading Minneapolis hope after her defeat of Mrs. Thomas Harrison, Denver, 7 and 6 yesterday.

The real battle, however, is expected to be between Mrs. Horn and Miss Turpie.

The champion matched par on every hole on Wednesday's round for an 83, the best score of the tourney. Miss Turpie turned in 84's for the first three rounds.

WHEN the Base Ball Bugs get huddled together in a fanning bee and bend their minds into arguing over this and that, the subject of kid prodigies is almost sure to come up. Especially this year when the box scores are fairly well sprinkled with new names.

And the subject of kid prodigies leads directly to Jimmy Foxx. Connie Mack's youthful backstop, just as surely as a successful overseas flight leads to a lot of funny banquets where the hero fliers are fed up on a slab of papier-mache roast chicken and a guess of senseless chatter.

And the history of Jimmy Foxx almost parallels the history of Melvin Ott, that other kid marvel who is toiling with Mr. McGraw's New York Giants.

Jimmy is a kid. He's only 19 now and that's in his stocking feet, but he already has carved a niche for himself—as they say in the classics—with the Philadelphia fans and with the boys who roost in the grandstands and the bleachers over the American circuit.

And if Jimmy is young in years he's rather well along in experience with the free food and such doled out to ball players as he has been with the Athletics for three years or since he was 16—if our mathematics hasn't suffered from misuse.

And even before he was 16 young Mr. Foxx was cutting up dimes in baseball circles in the Eastern Shore League, down in Maryland where they can cook a chicken to a delicious turn—and in such an environment young Jimmy built up his baseball rep.

Jack Bentley, who has a farm down that way, was trying to spear the youngster for the Giants, and Frank Baker, the old-time home run king, had the tongs working overtime in behalf of Connie Mack. Baker landed him and sent him over to Philadelphia, postage collect, and he showed up before Connie, green, ambitious and full of pep.

The experting scribes looked him over, nodded their heads and murmured something which sounded like "Another kid from Portland."

But Mack was taken with the husky youngster and decided to keep him hanging around with the Athletics. Perhaps you don't recall it but in his day Mr. McGillicuddy—who is none other than Connie Mack—was quite a back-stop himself, and under the master's tutelage Jimmy absorbed considerable cunning. We could say he became almost Foxy behind the platter—we will say it despite the criticism that may follow.

Foxx now is a regular with the A's and does constant chores by relieving Mickey Cochrane and Cy Perkins—what a trio of catchers—and in the games in which he has worked he has not only done a good job of the receiving racket but he has also given a sterling account of himself when he steps in against American League pitching.

And think of the years he has to go. He may be a dazzling star before he has a chance to cast his first Presidential vote—in fact he probably will be.

GEORGE GODFREY, "BLACK MENACE", DEFEATED BY RISKO

TWO YANKEE STARS DIM IN ENGLISH TENNIS PLAY

235 POUND NEGRO GOES WAY OF WILLS

RISKO'S MARGIN OVER THE NEGRO, HOWEVER, WAS SLIGHT

RISKO'S WHIRLWIND BODY ATTACK IN LAST 3 ROUNDS GAINS VICTORY

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., June 28.—The heavyweight division was without a "black menace" today for the first time in years.

George Godfrey, 235-pound Alabama negro, went the way of Harry Wills last night, as he lost the judges' decision to Johnny Risko of Cleveland, in a 10-round bout.

Godfrey, however, was not as completely eliminated from consideration as was Wills, who fouled Jack Sharkey in the thirteenth round to avoid a knockout. Risko's margin of victory was slight. There were few dissenting voices, however, in the crowd of 27,849 spectators.

A whirlwind body attack in the last three rounds won the decision for Risko. Godfrey punched the Cleveland boy around the ring during the larger part of the first five rounds.

The tide of the battle shifted after the fifth round, Risko opening up a fierce body attack which Godfrey was unable to stave off.

Risko had little success hammering at Godfrey's jaw in the early rounds because of the negro's excessive height. He shifted his attack to the body in the late rounds, and carried four of the last five almost solely on these wallopings to the midriff.

Godfrey weakened after the fifth round and attempted to clinch and hold at every opportunity. Risko seemed to get his second wind in the sixth round, and from that point on did his best fighting.

There were no knockdowns. Godfrey almost threw Risko to the canvas several times when he wrestled and cuffed him in the clinches.

Risko won in spite of the fact that every physical advantage was against him. He conceded Godfrey 44½ pounds in weight, 5½ inches in height and 5 inches in reach. Risko weighed 190½.

Risko has a busy campaign in front of him, having already signed to meet Roberto Roberti, the Italian giant, in July, and Paulino Uzcudun in August. If victorious in both these fights, he will be matched with Jack Sharkey in September.

BABE RUTH HITS 29TH HOMER OF THIS SEASON

Philadelphia, June 28.—(U.P.)—Babe Ruth hit his 29th homer of the season in the first inning of today's Yankee-Athletic game off Babe Waiberg, Philadelphia southpaw.

INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES OF N. D. IN LEAD

Bismarck, N. D., June 28.—(U.P.)—Independent candidates assumed the lead in the first returns of the North Dakota primary elections today.

First precinct reports gave R. A. Nestos, independent candidate for the nomination for United States senator on the republican ticket, a majority over Lynn J. Frazier, non-partisan candidate.

George T. Schafer, independent candidate for the republican nomination for governor, was leading by three to one over T. H. Thoreson, non-partisan.

Early returns on the proposal to remove the prohibition clause from the state constitution showed a small dry majority in favor of retaining the clause.

The Friend

"Our best friend is our worst enemy, for he causes us to plunge into a slough of trouble," said Mordelia Morgan. "Our enemy is our friend because he lets us alone to go our way in peace. Does a young husband come home in a mellow condition at an untimely hour—he has met a friend. Whatever a bride hears to the detriment of her spouse comes through the insinuation of a friend. It is a friend's delight to persuade young folks that they can paint or write or act, thus entailing upon them heart-break and despair. And it is an incontrovertible fact that no one ever rushed into print to refute a derogatory rumor who had not first had his attention called to it by a friend. As the late Job remarked, 'Deliver me from my friends.'"—Kansas City Star.

Bertha Books Good Teams For Early July Games

The House of David, Detroit Clowns and McCoy-Nolan Giants of Milwaukee will be seen in action against the fast Bertha team early in July. On July 1 the McCoy-Nolan Giants will play in Bertha. July 4 the Detroit Clowns will meet Bertha at Staples and on July 8 the House of David team, made up of bewhiskered athletes, will perform on the Bertha diamond. Manager Ernie Fisher believes that these three teams will play the sort of baseball that will put Bertha players on edge. Bertha has signed two new players, an infielder and outfielder which should strengthen the team as Manager Fisher has been playing all season so far with only nine men.

WILBUR COEN, GEORGE LOTT PASSED OUT

ALL ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY AT WIMBLEDON

FIELD AT END OF THE THIRD ROUND NARROWS TO 16

Wimbledon, England, June 28.—(U.P.)—Two American stars, Wilbur Coen and George Lott, passed out of the men's singles in the all England championships today as the field, at the end of the third round, narrowed to sixteen.

Young Coen went out, after a game fight, before a young Briton, H. W. Austin.

It took Rene LaCoste, the great French player, to eliminate George Lott; and even then it took him four sets to win.

While the Frenchmen breezed on through the singles partly at America's expense, two French girls faded out before Miss Helen Wills and Miss Elizabeth Ryan—Miss V. and J. Callay.

Miss Wills won with greatest ease. Occasionally she uncorked a devastating drive, but she was not forced to extend herself in any department, though the French girl's footwork was fairly speedy.

Henri Cochet, present holder of the all England singles title, entered the last sixteen by beating Col. H. H. Mayes, of Canada, 6-1, 5-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Miss Helen Jacobs, of the United States team, followed Mrs. Molla Mallory to defeat. She was beaten 6-8, 6-1, 8-6 by Miss Daphne Akhurst, champion of Australia.

JOHNNY GOODMAN IS ELIMINATED FROM GOLF TOURNEY

Des Moines, Ia., June 28.—(U.P.)—With Johnny Goodman of Omaha, Neb., last year's champion, eliminated from the trans-Mississippi golf tournament, Jimmy Manion, St. Louis veteran, was favored today to win the 1928 title.

Manion, also a former champion, defeated E. J. Rogers of Oklahoma City, 6 and 5, in yesterday's round. The defeat of Goodman and Paul Jackson, 18-year-old Kansas City youth, left Manion the only title-holder in the race.

The other survivors were R. S. Juran, Minneapolis; J. K. Weatherby, Minneapolis; W. Webster, Omaha; Robert McCrary, Des Moines and O. B. Winter, St. Louis.

WHAT OUTSTANDING STARS DID YESTERDAY

Babe Ruth, hit safely twice out of three trips. Batted in one run. Lou Gehrig, a triple and a single in three trips.

Rogers Hornsby, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Paul Waner, Frankie Frisch and Harry Heilmann were idle.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN TO MEET EMMANUEL IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

New York, June 28.—(U.P.)—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, will meet Armand Emmanuel, Jewish lawyer from San Francisco, in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Loughran is rated generally as a three to one favorite over Emmanuel.

The title will not be at stake. Emmanuel weighing more than the 175-pound limit.

New York, June 28.—(U.P.)—Armand Emmanuel, Pacific coast light heavyweight, outwitted Tommy Loughran by a half pound for their bout in Madison Square Garden tonight. Emmanuel weighed 175½ and Loughran 174½.

Emmanuel was forced to drink three glasses of water to bring himself above the 175 pound light heavyweight maximum limit, in accordance with the articles of the fight, which therefore will not be a championship bout.

MRS. LEE MIDA HOLDS 1-STROKE LEAD OVER MRS. PARDUE

Chicago, June 28.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago, held a 1-stroke lead over Mrs. Austin Pardue of Hibbing, Minn., today as the women's western medal play championship entered its final 18-hole round.

Mrs. Mida, winner of two previous championships, duplicated her first 87 yesterday for a total of 174, while Mrs. Pardue took one stroke more. Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago was third with 178.

Ernie Nevers, the great football star, has been sent to the minors by the St. Louis Browns. It seems that the big leagues weren't in the need of touchdowns just now.

In his earliest baseball days, Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn National League Baseball club, had quite a reputation as a wrestler as well as a ball player.

Five major league clubs are interested in the eighteen-year-old shortstop, Stevens, with New Haven in the Eastern league. His work has featured for New Haven this season.

Max Carey, Brooklyn outfielder, who has been tearing around the basepaths for 20 years, has led the National league in base thefts ten times in the past fourteen years and has been second the other four times.

Watching the Scoreboard

(By United Press)

Yesterday's Hero—Talt, Boston Red Sox right fielder, who hit safely five times out of as many trips to the plate. The Boston Red Sox won a double header from the Washington Senators 4 to 1 and 11 to 4.

The New York Yankees increased their American league lead to 11 games by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics 7 to 4.

The only National league game yesterday saw the New York Giants beat the Phillies for the fourth straight time 9 to 8.

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNEY ON THE MINIKAHDA COURSE

Minneapolis, June 28.—(U.P.)—With all outsiders eliminated, favorites settled down to their final battles here today in the third round of trans-Mississippi women's golf tournament on the Minikahda course.

Miss Marian Turpie, New Orleans, and Mrs. Marjorie Burns Horn, defending champion of Kansas City, meet their strongest opposition of the week but are favored to go into the fourth tomorrow. Miss Turpie is paired with Mrs. Dow George, Minneapolis, while Mrs. Horn meets Mrs. D. S. Veitch, Kansas City.

Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, who turned in a medal score of 84 for Wednesday's round, meets Mrs. R. E. Drennan, also of Kansas City. In the fourth pairing Patricia Stephenson, 17-year-old Minneapolis girl, opposes Mrs. F. B. Jaffray, Minneapolis.

Miss Stephenson is the leading Minneapolis hope after her defeat of Mrs. Thomas Harrison, Denver, 7 and 6 yesterday.

The real battle, however, is expected to be between Mrs. Horn and Miss Turpie.

The enigma matched par on every hole on Wednesday's round for an 83, the best score of the tourney. Miss Turpie turned in 84's for the first three rounds.

Love's Ecstasy

by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty, blue-eyed country girl, unintentionally causes an automobile accident in which Gary Chester, young engineer, is injured. Next day Alveda leaves her home for New York to find work. On the train she makes the acquaintance of Marise de Rense, proprietor of a New York cabaret, who invites Alveda to make her home with her while in the city. Alveda gets a secretarial position with the same firm which employs Gary Chester. He fails to recognize her. Lonely and blue, Alveda calls upon Marise and her friend Clive Mortimer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

THAT startling, uncanny laugh, coming from behind the curtains! Alveda jumped up, listening and scared . . .

"What is it? Who—?"

The Englishman, Clive Mortimer, blew a nonchalant puff of smoke into the air. He cocked one ear in the direction of the sound, winked, reassuredly at Alveda, and said, mockingly, for the benefit of the unseen audience: "It's only a silly little half-wit who's so fascinated by me that she just can't keep away! She's a theatrical soul, and that hyena laugh is her vaudeville act!"

At that, the curtains parted, and into the room rushed a very pretty, very ornate young girl, not more than eighteen years of age.

"Of all the conceited idiots!" She darted towards Clive, snatched the cigarette from his mouth and placed it in her lips. "I love you like a dose of poison, and you know it well!"

"Children, children, stop your quarreling." Behind the newcomer, and carrying a small brown parcel containing the needed oranges, her hat on her head, was Marise. Then, to Alveda: "This is my small sister, the Goldie I told you about. Goldie, meet Miss Ray."

The younger De Rense swung round on her absurdly high heels and favored Alveda with a cool stare.

"You working in this town?"

"I've got a secretarial job."

"Humph! Not in my line, thanks." Miss Goldie crinkled up her pert little nose.

"You mean, you haven't the brains," corrected Clive. He had taken the oranges from Marise with a murmured word, and now rang the bell for ice and other requisites.

"Ya—yal You've got a right to talk, when you can't earn an honest penny, anywhere." This Goldie was a spitfire. At the moment, with her red hair, she looked like a tawny leopard-cat.

"For the love of Mike, cut out the argument," impatiently demanded her older sister. "Miss Ray will think we're nothing but a lot of savages!"

With a roll of the eyes and an exaggerated shrug of her slim shoulders, Miss Goldie indicated that it mattered nought to her what anybody thought! She fell upon Clive's gin flask, held it aloft, and said: "I'm holding this to ransom till you pay that $10 debt of yours!"

He flushed. "What do you mean?"

"Don't high-hat me." Goldie tossed a pert, burnished head. She said: "You can't deny Marise lent you $10 last week, with the money she was to give me for a new frock. This flask—suppose I hock it—ought to be worth all of that—"

He snatched the flask away from her as the negro maid entered the room. He became very busy, squeezing oranges into the cocktail shaker, adding gin and ice, and shaking vigorously.

Goldie pouted her way to the piano, where Marise had again laid down her pocketbook. "Since your home is so forgetful about paying his debts, I suppose I can help myself to this?" She extracted two five dollar bills.

"I can't spare it, Goldie! Honest, I can't!"

"Ya! Ha! You can spare anything for him!" The 18-year-old flung Clive a jealous look. Then, lowering her voice, and very coaxing: "Oh, Marise, do let me have the money, to get that new frock for tonight. It's reduced to $16.50 since we last saw it—I already have saved $6.50 of my own—maybe he (you know who I mean!) will be there? He's such a prince—I want to look lovely—he's only seen me in old rags—"

Marise was yielding with reluctance. It was evident she spoiled this little sister—couldn't refuse her anything.

Clive poured some of the concoction into a glass, said—placatingly—to Goldie: "You try it." Then, to Alveda: "It's the flappers in this city who are the cocktail connoisseurs!"

"Leave her alone, Clive. She's too young—and at this hour—"

But Goldie's sharp elbow pushed the older sister back.

"Come off it! You're talking for the benefit of Miss Simplicity,"—with a wink towards Alveda, and a quick tilting of the glass. "Oh, goofy!" She licked her lips. "A little more gin, you bartender! Would that we had a dash of French vermouth!"

Marise looked vexed. She did not say any more, however, and when Alveda declined, did not press her to participate.

She took a sip or two of the cocktail, took Alveda by the arm, and, with a light: "Dinner's ready. You two follow us," led Alveda downstairs.

Oriental Rug Makers

Masters of the Art

Although it is unknown where the making of rugs originated, says the Washington Star, the highest development of this art was reached in the Orient centuries ago, according to rug experts. The nearest to perfect carpets produced are said to have been made in the city of Babylon during the years 3300 to 538 B. C.

The gradual retrogression in this art is said to be due chiefly to the more complete commercialization of the industry. When rugs first were made merely for religious purposes or for the use of the maker, the best of his work went into the rug; but as the foreign market gradually grew and rugs began to be exported to Europe and other markets, workmanship and art were subordinated to quantity production.

Carpets made in the Orient centuries ago cannot be duplicated today. Coloring and blending of colors, as well as the making of the dye, have suffered along with the quality of workmanship. The use of vegetable dyes, in many instances, has given way to the use of aniline or chemical ones, which are said to be harmful to the pile or face of the carpet. By the use of chemical dyes of bright colors and then washing out the colors to get softer shades and tones, the oriental carpet is said to have suffered great damage.

Speak Clearly When

Addressing the Deaf

To the person with imperfect hearing there are two kinds of speakers who are regarded with dread: those slovenly speakers who articulate imperfectly, and those uneven speakers who in a single sentence rise to their full vocal capacity and then sink to a whisper, observes Dr. Dana W. Drury, in an article on the fatigue that comes from imperfect hearing, in Hygeia Magazine.

When that which is at best a distorted sentence becomes further distorted by imperfect utterance, the burden imposed by misfortune is made heavier by needless carelessness on the part of the very persons who might help to make the load lighter.

One of the most effective helps that can be rendered to the deafened is gentle speech, well modulated, of an even tenor and above all, articulate. Doctor Drury urges. When it is necessary to increase the voice volume, this should be done with due regard to evenness of tone and distinctness of articulation.

Resting the Brain

Sleep is the resting time of the brain. The brain cannot be active all the time any more than any other organ. When the brain is active, the result is consciousness; when the brain is at rest, the result is unconsciousness. We really do not understand how this interdependence comes about; in the present state of our knowledge we have to take it as an ultimate fact of life. The brain seems to require to rest about eight hours out of the twenty-four. All organs work and rest alternately, though the times of their rest are all much shorter than the time of the resting of the brain. The heart, for instance, rests only about four-tenths of a second each second.—Dr. D. F. Fraser-Harris in the Forum.

Eagle Claws as Money

Currency takes some queer shapes in N. W. Queensland, Australia. Promissory notes in amounts from $1 to $5 are issued by several business firms, and remain in circulation for one year, being accepted unquestioningly throughout the district. Other substitutes for coin are eagle claws at $1 the pair and wild dog skulls at $5 apiece. The Sydney Bulletin recently told of a farmer who wanted "change" for a $5 note and accepted two wild dog skulls, four eagle claws and eight promissory notes bearing four signatures of men he had never even heard of.

Wise Caddie

A golfer, who was not particularly good at the game, made his approach shot. It was a blind hole and was also rather short. The caddie, just visible over the intervening knoll, gesticulated wildly for a moment. "What is it?" said the player, coming up to the green. "You've holed out," said the caddie. "Done it in two." Sure enough the ball was down. The player gave the caddie half a dollar. The next day every man who went out with that caddie did the same hole in two.

Love's Ecstasy

by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty, blue-eyed country girl, unintentionally causes an automobile accident in which Gary Chester, young engineer, is injured. Next day Alela leaves her home for New York to find work. On the train she makes the acquaintance of Marise de Rense, proprietor of a New York cabaret, who invites Alela to make her home with her while in the city. Alela gets a secretarial position with the same firm which employs Gary Chester. He fails to recognize her. Lonely and blue, Alela calls upon Marise and her friend Clive Mortimer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

THAT startling, uncanny laugh, coming from behind the curtains! Alela jumped up, listening and scared . . .

"What is it? Who—?"

The Englishman, Clive Mortimer, blew a nonchalant puff of smoke into the air. He cocked one ear in the direction of the sound, winked, reassuringly at Alela, and said, mockingly, for the benefit of the unseen audience: "It's only a silly little half-wit who's so fascinated by me that she just can't keep away! She's a theatrical soul, and that hyena laugh is her vaudeville act!"

At that, the curtains parted, and into the room rushed a very pretty, very ornate young girl, not more than eighteen years of age.

"Of all the conceited idiots!" She darted towards Clive, snatched the cigarette from his mouth and placed it in her lips. "I love you like a dose of poison, and you know it well!"

"Children, children, stop your quarreling. Behind the new-comer, carrying a small brown parcel containing the needed oranges, her hat on her head, was Marise. Then, to Alela: "This is my small sister, the Goldie I told you about. Goldie, meet Miss Ray."

The younger De Rense swung round on her absurdly high heels and favored Alela with a cool stare.

"You working in this town?"

"I've got a secretarial job."

"Humph! Not in my line, thanks." Miss Goldie crinkled up her little nose.

"You mean, you haven't the brains," corrected Clive. He had taken the oranges from Marise with a murmured word, and now rang the bell for ice and other requisites.

"Ya—yal You've got a right to talk, when you can't earn an honest penny, anywhere." This Goldie was a spitfire. At the moment, with her red hair, she looked like a tawny leopard-cat.

"For the love of Mike, cut out the argument," impatiently demanded her older sister. "Miss Ray will think we're nothing but a lot of savages!"

With a roll of the eyes and an exaggerated shrug of her slim shoulders, Miss Goldie indicated that it mattered nought to her what anybody thought! She fell upon Clive's gin flask, held it aloft, and said: "I'm holding this to ransom till you pay that $10 debt of yours!"

He flushed. "What do you mean?"

"Don't high-hat me." Goldie tossed a pert, burnished head. She said: "You can't deny Marise lent you $10 last week, with the money she was to give me for a new frock."

This flask—suppose I hock it—ought to be worth all of that—"

He snatched the flask away from her as the negro maid entered the room. He became very busy, squeezing oranges into the cocktail shaker, adding gin and ice, and shaking vigorously.

Goldie pouted her way to the piano, where Marise had again laid down her pocketbook. "Since your Romeo is so forgetful about paying his debts, I suppose I can help myself to this?" She extracted two five dollar bills.

"I can't spare it, Goldie! Honest, I can't!"

"Ya! Ha! You can spare anything for him!" The 18-year-old flung Clive a jealous look. Then, lowering her voice, and very coaxing: "Oh, Marise, do let me have the money, to get that new frock for tonight. It's reduced to $16.50 since we last saw it—I already have saved $6.50 of my own—maybe he (you know who I mean!) will be there? He's such a prince—I want to look lovely—he's only seen me in old rags—"

Marise was yielding with reluctance. It was evident she spoiled this little sister—couldn't refuse her anything.

Clive poured some of the concoction into a glass, said—placatingly—to Goldie: "You try it." Then, to Alela: "It's the flappers in this city who are the cocktail connoisseurs!"

"Leave her alone, Clive. She's too young—and at this hour—"

But Goldie's sharp elbow pushed the older sister back.

"Come off it! You're talking for the benefit of Miss Simplicity,"—with a wink towards Alela, and a quick tilting of the glass. "Oh, goody!"

She licked her lips. "A little more gin, you bartender! Would that we had a dash of French vermouth!"

Marise looked vexed. She did not say any more, however, and when Alela declined, did not press her to participate.

She took a sip or two of the cocktail, took Alela by the arm, and, with a light: "Dinner's ready. You two follow us," led Alela downstairs.

Copyright, 1928, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The dining-room was in the basement of the house—a long, low-ceilinged room. No sunshine penetrated. It was dim and cool.

"Here. You sit here, by me." Marise piloted her guest into a chair near the head of the table—then seated herself. "Tell me about your new job—and everything."

Some of the sparkle seemed to have gone from the older woman's face. Her eyes seemed tired.

"I've got a position as 'substitute' for a secretary in a downtown office while she's away sick."

A little pang shot through Alela at recollection of this morning's meeting with Gary Chester and his failure to recognize her as the girl who had helped him at the time of his accident, up-State. "It's from nine to five, and $30 a week."

"That's bully," Marise said. She patted Alela's hand in friendly fashion. "And where you staying?"

Alela named the big hotel. "$4.50 a night is their cheapest! I thought you'd more horse sense than run yourself into that!"

"I'm leaving—right away—I have to look for a place to live."

Marise hesitated, gave a long glance at Alela's open, apple-blossom, unsophisticated face. "I like the looks of you. You're square and straight. You'd be a good influence on Goldie, whose gone boy-crazy, and dollar-crazy, and dress-crazy, and who's aiming to hit too hard a pace. Why not pack up your duds and come right here and stay with us? I'd only charge you ten a week, with breakfast and supper included."

"It's awfully kind of you, but—"

"Aw, come! You want to send money home? That'll leave you with $20 a week for clothes and lunches and so forth, and you can spare a bit of that for the old folks."

"It isn't enough to pay you!" Alela hesitated. She hadn't been particularly attracted to the pert young Goldie—she did not like or trust Clive Mortimer—and she knew little of Marise.

"Money be damned—I've taken a fancy to you," the latter said. Then, wistfully: "It would be grand to have someone like you here, whom I could open my mind and heart to . . . sort of confide in when I get blue . . . I do get low, at times . . . worrying about Goldie, and the future, and the club, and—and things Clive does—he might get in trouble—he's a week, but awfully good-hearted kind of a chap. He leans on me. I—Im fond of Clive. I worry over him, you know. And—" frankly, and looking Alela in the face—"the $10 would be a help to me. Goldie's extravagant. We're not well-off."

Alela took decision quickly. She trusted this Marise—was sorry for her. "All right—and thank you for suggesting it. I'll get my trunk and bring it here," she said.

Oriental Rug Makers

Masters of the Art

Although it is unknown where the making of rugs originated, says the Washington Star, the highest development of this art was reached in the Orient centuries ago, according to rug experts. The nearest to perfect carpets produced are said to have been made in the city of Babylon during the years 2300 to 538 B. C.

The gradual retrogression in this art is said to be due chiefly to the more complete commercialization of the industry. When rugs first were made merely for religious purposes or for the use of the maker, the best of his work went into the rug; but as the foreign market gradually grew and rugs began to be exported to Europe and other markets, workmanship and art were subordinated to quantity production.

Carpets made in the Orient centuries ago cannot be duplicated today. Coloring and blending of colors, as well as the making of the dye, have suffered along with the quality of workmanship. The use of vegetable dyes, in many instances, has given way to the use of aniline or chemical ones, which are said to be harmful to the pile or face of the carpet. By the use of chemical dyes of bright colors and then washing out the colors to get softer shades and tones, the oriental carpet is said to have suffered great damage.

Speak Clearly When

Addressing the Deaf

To the person with imperfect hearing there are two kinds of speakers who are regarded with dread: those slovenly speakers who articulate imperfectly, and those uneven speakers who in a single sentence rise to their full vocal capacity and then sink to a whisper, observes Dr. Dana W. Drury, in an article on the fatigue that comes from imperfect hearing, in Hygeia Magazine.

When that which is at best a distorted sentence becomes further distorted by imperfect utterance, the burden imposed by misfortune is made heavier by needless carelessness on the part of the very persons who might help to make the load lighter.

One of the most effective helps that can be rendered to the deafened is gentle speech, well modulated, of an even tenor and above all, articulate. Doctor Drury urges. When it is necessary to increase the voice volume, this should be done with due regard to evenness of tone and distinctness of articulation.

Resting the Brain

Sleep is the resting time of the brain. The brain cannot be active all the time any more than any other organ. When the brain is active, the result is consciousness; when the brain is at rest, the result is unconsciousness. We really do not understand how this interdependence comes about; in the present state of our knowledge we have to take it as an ultimate fact of life. The brain seems to require to rest about eight hours out of the twenty-four. All organs work and rest alternately, though the times of their rest are all much shorter than the time of the resting of the brain. The heart, for instance, rests only about four-tenths of a second each second.—Dr. D. F. Fraser-Harris in the Forum.

Eagle Claws as Money

Currency takes some queer shapes in N. W. Queensland, Australia. Promissory notes in amounts from $1 to $5 are issued by several business firms, and remain in circulation for one year, being accepted unquestioningly throughout the district. Other substitutes for coin are eagle claws at $1 the pair and wild dog scalps at $5 apiece. The Sydney Bulletin recently told of a farmer who wanted "change" for a $5 note and accepted two wild dog scalps, four eagle claws and eight promissory notes bearing four signatures of men he had never even heard of.

Wise Caddie

A golfer, who was not particularly good at the game, made his approach shot. It was a blind hole and was also rather short. The caddie, just visible over the intervening knoll, gesticulated wildly for a moment. "What is it?" said the player, coming up to the green. "You've holed out," said the caddie. "Done it in two!" Sure enough the ball was down. The player gave the caddie half a dollar. The next day every man who went out with that caddie did the same hole in two!

ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW CALLED OFF

Good Blossoms Limited, Due to Continued Cold Weather of Past

SOME NICE SPECIMENS

Those Interested in Flowers to View Gardens in the City

The annual flower show has been called off because the number of good blossoms this season has been very limited due to the continued cold weather. Although there are some very nice collections in the city there are not enough of them to make a large show. To take the place of the show it is suggested that those interested go around to the homes of those having some of the finer specimens and look them over.

The Little Falls society will hold a flower show tomorrow and Saturday and they extend a very cordial invitation to all Brainerd flower lovers to attend the show if at all possible. Interested flower growers in Little Falls and St. Cloud have stated that they intend to visit the gardens in Brainerd and get what "pointers" they can on Brainerd flower culture.

ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW CALLED OFF

Good Blossoms Limited, Due to Continued Cold Weather of Past

SOME NICE SPECIMENS

Those Interested in Flowers to View Gardens in the City

The annual flower show has been called off because the number of good blossoms this season has been very limited due to the continued cold weather. Although there are some very nice collections in the city there are not enough of them to make a large show. To take the place of the show it is suggested that those interested go around to the homes of those having some of the finer specimens and look them over.

The Little Falls society will hold a flower show tomorrow and Saturday and they extend a very cordial invitation to all Brainerd flower lovers to attend the show if at all possible. Interested flower growers in Little Falls and St. Cloud have stated that they intend to visit the gardens in Brainerd and get what "pointers" they can on Brainerd flower culture.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Tenacious?

Let's try

Has he the bulldog grip? Has he this grip on the purpose of life or some fancy a bulldog grip on him?

Tenacity of purpose is a rare quality. Often some people are tenacious when they should not be and not enough so when they should be. They are called stubborn.

If you would know a writer's mental attitude on this subject without engaging him in argument, simply look for the t bar hook. If you find that at the end of a dash, t bar or terminal he makes a little hook, similar to a fish-hook, the conclusion may be safely recorded that this writer hangs on to his own ideas with a grip that is almost furious. If the writer could get a grip on his life work as he has on some of his pet hobbies or theories, he would be a winner.

If the lower loop of the letter 't' is brought up to its finish on the left hand side of the down stroke, the writer has little tenacity and is easily influenced—especially when under emotional strain. Heavy down stroke also indicate tenacity.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Tenacious?

Let's trim

Has he the bulldog grip? Has he this grip on the purpose of life or some fancy a bulldog grip on him?

Tenacity of purpose is a rare quality. Often some people are tenacious when they should not be and not enough so when they should be. They are called stubborn.

If you would know a writer's mental attitude on this subject without engaging him in argument, simply look for the t bar hook. If you find that at the end of a dash, t bar or terminal he makes a little hook, similar to a fish-hook, the conclusion may be safely recorded that this writer hangs on to his own ideas with a grip that is almost furious. If the writer could get a grip on his life work as he has on some of his pet hobbies or theories, he would be a winner.

If the lower loop of the letter is brought up to its finish on the left hand side of the down stroke, the writer has little tenacity and is easily influenced—especially when under emotional strain. Heavy down stroke also indicate tenacity.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)
